

John Mattingly's 12 Seconds in the Dark: A Thrilling Account of a Pivotal Night in American History

On the fateful night of March 13, 2020, John Mattingly, a seasoned Louisville Metro Police officer, found himself at the center of a controversial and tragic event that would forever change the course of American history. Mattingly, along with his fellow officers, was tasked with executing a no-knock search warrant at the apartment of Breonna Taylor, a 26-year-old African American woman. The no-knock warrant, which allowed the officers to enter the apartment without announcing themselves, was obtained as part of a narcotics investigation.

As the officers entered Taylor's apartment, they were met with gunfire. Taylor's boyfriend, Kenneth Walker, who believed the officers to be intruders, fired at them. In the ensuing chaos, Mattingly was shot in the leg and Taylor was killed by multiple gunshots. The tragic events of that night sparked widespread protests and unrest across the country, and brought to the forefront the issue of police brutality and the use of no-knock warrants.
