Eden is the most popular girl in school. She's beautiful, smart, and athletic. She has everything she could ever want, including the attention of every boy in school. But Eden is also lonely. She feels like she doesn't really belong anywhere.

Noah is the new kid in school. He's quiet, shy, and introverted. He doesn't fit in with the popular crowd, and he's often the target of their bullying. But Noah is also kind, compassionate, and intelligent.

When Eden and Noah are forced to work together on a school project, they start to see each other in a new light. They realize that they have more in common than they thought, and they start to fall for each other.

But their relationship is forbidden. Eden is the most popular girl in school, and Noah is a nobody. If they're caught together, Eden's reputation will be ruined.

Eden and Noah must decide if their love is worth the risk.

Review

Love, Not Popular is a beautifully written and emotionally resonant contemporary romance novel. The characters are well-developed and relatable, and the story is both heartwarming and heartbreaking.

I loved the way that the author explored the themes of love, popularity, and belonging. Eden and Noah are both complex characters who are struggling to find their place in the world. They both have their own insecurities and fears, but they also have a deep connection with each other.

The romance between Eden and Noah is slow-burn and believable. It's not based on physical attraction or popularity, but on a genuine connection and mutual respect. I rooted for them every step of the way.

The ending of Love, Not Popular is both satisfying and bittersweet. It's a reminder that love isn't always easy, but it's always worth fighting for.

Overall

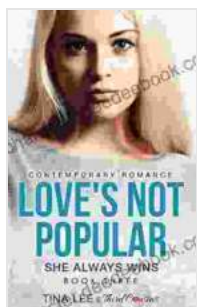

Love, Not Popular is a must-read for fans of contemporary romance. It's a beautifully written and emotionally resonant story about love, popularity, and belonging. I highly recommend it.
