Pip was the oldest and the wisest of the three. He was always coming up with ideas and plans. Squeak was the middle child and the most playful. He loved to play games and make jokes. Wizzle was the youngest and the most timid of the three. He was always hiding behind his older brothers.

One day, a big bad robot came to the planet Xarpti. The robot was tall and mean, and it had a loud, booming voice. The robot said that it was going to take over the planet and turn all the aliens into its slaves.

The three little aliens were terrified. They didn't know what to do. Pip thought for a moment and then he said, "I have an idea. We're going to build three little houses, and we're going to hide in them. The robot won't be able to find us."

So the three little aliens set to work building their houses. Pip built a house of straw, Squeak built a house of sticks, and Wizzle built a house of bricks. The next day, the big bad robot came back. It saw the three little houses and it said, "I'm going to blow down your houses and turn you all into my slaves."

The robot blew down the house of straw and the house of sticks, but it couldn't blow down the house of bricks.

The robot was so angry that it started to kick the house of bricks. But the house was too strong and the robot couldn't break it down.

Finally, the robot gave up and it went away.

The three little aliens were so happy that they had outsmarted the big bad robot. They lived happily ever after in their house of bricks.
